

Communing with the Earth

As religious fundamentalists continue to disassociate themselves from the Earth and any holistic connection to animate and inanimate life other than their very limited regard for fetuses and the comatose, there is another kingdom that exists in sync with our physical world that is trying to awaken us from the deep amnesia of our cosmic roots. While not usually seen by humans, it is seen by animals, and by shamans and healers who have the spiritual and mental capacities to see and function beyond the mundane. This is the kingdom of the elementals, those entities tied to the welfare of this planet who exist as pure consciousness but can be recognized in the dream or transcendent state; that state where we are able to let go of the physical and recognize the intelligence that controls the Earth's processes.

This intelligence is part of the DNA shared by all living creatures and between species. As a result, when out of body, we can make contact with it and communicate with it. It is there, when we want to commune and learn from it, and it manifests in forms that are recognizable to us; sometimes humanoid and other times as alien creatures. As part of Earth's psyche, it most often manifests as plant intelligence through entities, and communication can be established during sacred ceremony, or when ingesting "intelligent" plants.

These plant entities can serve as a guide to restoring the Earth and her resources to their pristine states. They will guide you to reconnect with the life force that is shared between all animate and inanimate natural resources. Their own sustenance depends on right mind and attentiveness to the intricate energies that maintain the delicate cosmic balance.

While religious fundamentalists destroy the planet and people on it because they believe it will bring forth the "new heaven on Earth" they are in fact destroying not only the Earth in their lifetime, but their own opportunity to be reborn into sustenance and abundance. Even the bible says that "you reap what you sow". When you don't sow, your world is barren, and when you destroy, the outcome is your own destruction. So their rebirth will be, at the very least, barren, if not totally dismal and a living hell, similar to what they created in their lifetime.

For those who are more attuned to the Earth and plant kingdom, the elementals can help create mountains out of mole hills, or even safe and fruitful havens out of ravaged desert; a feat once witnessed in Findhorn. In fact, the elementals can even help protect you from major Earth catastrophes if you work with them, as they do have access to akashic knowledge and some control over where to be during the Earth's purging of disruptive and toxic forces.

The point is that we are currently at the point of no return. Mass consciousness is split, and while a majority wants peace, sustenance and abundance, a minority is holding the reigns. This minority has led the Earth down a path that leaves the Great Mother no other option than to purge herself. These self-righteous fundamentalists, who for their own edification choose to kill, and destroy, and disassociate themselves from the feminine and sustaining side of life, will not find heaven on Earth after all. They have done nothing in this lifetime or in these “endtimes” to create heaven on Earth. And when they leave the physical and find themselves in the realms of the transcendent Earth entities, they will find that they are neither welcome in the transcendent realms nor in the rebirthed kingdom on Earth. But those who hold the Earth sacred and work with the elementals will play an integral role in restoring the planet to her natural balance as she purges the damned and mindless once and for all.
