

Riding the Galactic Wave

By now you are moving full throttle through major galactic and planetary changes that are more than likely affecting your term health, perception and consciousness. On a global scale, Earth is shedding her skin, getting ready to rebirth. Some of us are tuned into these birth pangs and are suffering from morning sickness, headaches, nausea, and the like as the Earth goes through her quakes, tornadoes and general cleansing process. It is important to drink a lot of water during these changes because you are changing as well; that is, you are genetically mutating to become the new human and you must cleanse yourself and release the toxic sludge of the old frequency. The new human can only sustain itself if it is vibrating at the same frequency as the changing Earth and galactic center. This frequency is making us all change rather quickly. Those who don't or can't resonate with this new frequency will die or kill themselves in the process. I would also venture to add that in the opposing, or lower, frequency, you will end up in a locked reality of fear and ill-contrived thoughts courtesy of the thought police and your own inability to recognize the "static" for what it is.

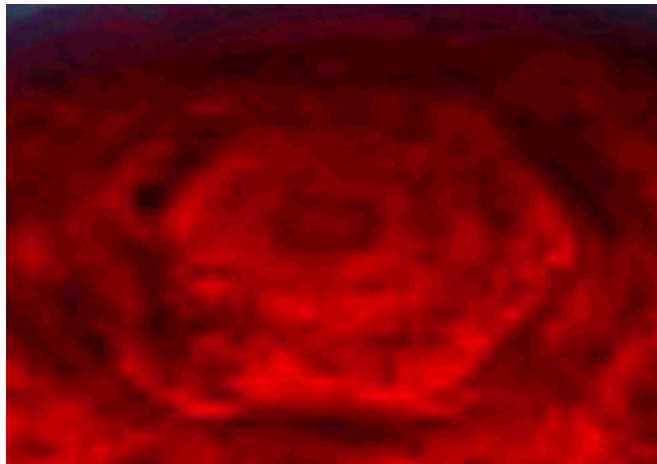

A good part of the change and mutation deals with consciousness and how we perceive the world around us. As a result, you should be seriously paying attention to what you focus on and intentionally manifesting your choices and commitments for your future.

The new consciousness is very focused and very creative; it is currently designing blueprints for the new institutions and structures that will be developed and built during the years that Pluto moves through Capricorn. This consciousness is being seeded now by Pluto moving through the galactic center. The Earth must shed her skin so that these seeds can be planted anew; and not upon yet another old structure. This rebirth is about a new galactic cycle, not just about another Earth cycle, reincarnation cycle, or yet one more lost opportunity to try and get it right. Getting it right now is what this consciousness is all about.

The galactic frequency is forcing everyone to look at their overall life and choices, and focus one's highest intentions, desires, motivations and energies into building sustainable and visionary foundations for a new humanity. Those that resist will not be part of the new emerging reality. There is a need in all areas for new and viable ideas: in education, politics, community, healthcare, consensus building, clean energy, transportation, public policy, spirituality, science, psychology, social services, the arts, etc.

The old paradigm of letting someone else tell us what it's all about, what to do, what to think, what to eat, who to live with, where to live, who to marry, how to make a living, how to invest, when to have sex, how and when to die, will no longer be viable. That is, except for those without vision and a plan, who are still in major denial about the coming changes and how these changes will redefine our future reality.

The galactic wave is getting greater and bigger, just as the Earth's tsunamis are getting greater and bigger. The options are to ride with it to the end or resist it, in which case you will be swept under with the scattered debris, tumbled, and drowned. Not everyone sees the Earth changes as anything more than climatic but, in fact, the entire galaxy is going through the same changes and as I write this, NASA has picked up drastic weather over Saturn, in a hexagonal formation at one pole that has never been seen before, and a major "eye" of a storm formation at the other pole.

The hexagon is the Star of David (six-pointed star) and the winds sweeping Saturn's surface are similar to those that are sweeping here, rushing in the major forces from "God" or the galactic center. The eye of the storm is the eye of God or the null space in the universe from which creation occurs, imprinting the changes that are about to occur in a storm-like fashion affecting the entire galaxy. As Pluto moves into Capricorn, which is ruled by Saturn, the coming changes will be a Pluto/Saturn concerted effort, resulting in grand-scale changes on a scale that no generation on Earth in this lifetime has seen before.

To be part of these changes and to survive the upheavals, you must have a clear vision of your future and a plan to get there. When the galactic wave sweeps up the last of us, our end destination will be where we have consciously formed an intention to be. If you're undecided, resistant, oblivious, in denial, or uninterested, you will go down with the scattered debris. Otherwise, you'll rise to the occasion. Are you ready to ride the wave?
