

Disengaging from the Matrix: Toward a Sustainable Future

More than ever before, it is important to look at ourselves and reflect on where and what we want to be in another ten years. The future is not just for our children, it is also for the sake of humanity. If we are to have a future, we must consider the entire planet and how our current modus operandi will affect virtually every person, system, and institution around the world. The Common Cause rally is to think globally and act locally. That is the call, that is the way, that is the very narrow path toward recreating wisdom, focus and harmony on this Planet, the Earth.

As we move toward elections, we can hear the war cries from the old patriarchs as they try to grab every last resource and pull the rug out from under us under the guise of freedom and democracy but in reality, in the name of money and power. Our financial institutions are all at stake and that is where part of the battle will be fought: through our banks and money centers. What they really want is to create chaos and take your money as they are doing now, and spend it for their own interests at your expense. Not only that, but then they want to turn around and make you pay their debts and the tax on their debts! Thus, expect an attack of one or more financial institutions; especially if it will benefit occupying, rebuilding, and arming a nation that is remotely, if at all, associated with the actual attack. And then they will tell you that the money is gone and start charging you for services that you never had to pay before like drinking water and clean, most likely bottled, oxygen (while they use the money they quietly withdrew from the banks before the attacks, and have their own arms-for-hostage spending sprees). Whoopee! Would you want to put your eggs into their basket for your future or into your own basket?

There are ways to avoid this and ways to protect oneself. There are ways to disengage from the web of the Matrix that they created at their pleasure, for their profit, at the expense of our own resources, our money and ourselves. Human beings, as far as these people are concerned, are commodities to be traded, as in the slave trade. Only now you don't see it; it's all done in the banks! So you can do something to protect yourself, but to do so means changing the way you operate so that it weakens their influence on your economic future and strengthens yours:

What You Should Be Doing:

- Practicing kindness to strangers
- Getting to know your neighbors so you can help each other in an emergency
- Bartering for services where you can
- Banking your money in institutions that support community development
- Balancing your own checkbook
- Using free and sustainable energy products
- Planting trees, supporting green energy
- Recycling timber, lumber, and other materials
- Driving low-polluting, low-consumption cars, preferably electric or corn-oil operated
- Learning the indigenous practices for protecting and sustaining the Earth
- Creating independent economic models and ventures that support your community and which in turn, support you
- Supporting media that support Earth-consciousness and peace
- Starting new media outlets that support Earth-consciousness and peace
- Supporting companies that support community development and the Earth
- Supporting companies that give you customer service and not voice mail
- Supporting companies that provide decent wages and development programs for their employees
- Keeping big retailers (Walmart) that prey on small shops out of the community
- Supporting companies that offer sustainable and recyclable services and products
- Supporting companies that are compassionate and do not use child labor
- Setting up education centers to teach children self-sufficiency and sustainability
- Supporting a teacher and bartering for services
- Setting up communications centers (Internet and other media) to network within the community, and showing/linking to communities and people working with successful, sustainable models

Recruiting people that practice these values and run them for public office
ACTING NOW (or you'll PAY LATER)!

What You Should Avoid Doing:

Supporting banks, funds, communications firms, media and institutions that support the military, industrial, oil and auto complexes
Supporting companies that outsource jobs
Relying on the "electronic" banking system
Letting banks and services control your banking
Allowing banks to pay your bills
Abandoning your cancelled checks
Banking with institutions that charge big fees
Buying into the manipulated stock market (the biggest lottery scam in the world)
Banking in and supporting institutions that charge for customer service
Using banks and services that make it difficult to talk to a live person
Shopping at Walmart or other retail institutions that put small community companies out of business
Watching mainstream media unless you need to know what the destroyers and manipulators are up to
