

Galactic Impulses and Earth Frequencies

I believe I am a fairly grounded person with an awareness of human nature that is more profound than that of the majority of people who sleepwalk through their lives. I spend everyday contemplating my actions and those of others and evaluating the effects of those actions. Sometimes I am amazed at my actions and those of others, and other times I am totally horrified. Considering I pay attention to my own actions, I find it curious that of late, I have been having major problems controlling my temper and seem to flare up at the slightest provocation. Yet, as I look around in the news and on the roads, I find that I'm not the only one who is flaring up. Murders are increasing, particularly those involving women and children by husbands and boyfriends. The backlash against women is manifesting in relationships around the globe as the female energy is getting more focused and active. I haven't been able to nail down the constant until now. And it's not just the men who are pissed; the women are too and we're not going to take it anymore.

Beside the fact that the Earth is retuning herself, sort of like a pitch fork that sends a vibration through her body to realign all that's out of whack, Pluto is again approaching the Galactic Center and blowing off the veil of social, cultural, and environmental restrictions that have kept the feminine under thumb for the last 3200 years. This a sign that the feminine is soon going to take back her power, whether it be through more local politics, gay unions, environmental justice or just plain birthing of more female babies to correct the testosterone imbalance.

As we approach yet another crossing of Pluto with the Galactic Center in mid-July, we can expect to see more flareups among men and women, as women, tired of the consistent warmongering, step into the race for local and national Congressional seats and get more active and outspoken about the state of the planet and even refuse to wed, as is happening more often and in more countries. This rage is creating a buckle in the fabric of the planet and Pluto will not be able to keep a lid on the pot as the Galactic Center unravels the old fabric to replace it with the new.

The spinning Galactic Center is taking Earth through the galactic underworld and the planet has no choice but to shed her skin to deal with the heat, the flashes of rage, and the changing energies. This heat is what's making me, and those that I've observed, so tired, so angry, so unfocused, so scattered and basically wanting to tear at our perceived enemies, whether they are drivers, politicians, co-workers, or whomever. However, they are only a reflection of our own inner turmoil that must now be released so that we can retune to the changing Earth vibration that is realigning the social, cultural and environmental fabric of the planet to the unfiltered, direct and intense cosmic energies of the Galactic Center.

We tend to grow more agitated and tired as the Galactic Center bombards us with its energies, and Pluto crossing the GC is forcing us to deal with subconscious and repressed issues as we tune into the very stark truths about ourselves and the planet.

Those who can't deal with these truths strike out and unfortunately, while women are having their own share of problems right now realigning their energies to that of the planet, many men are reacting more violently than usual. This is a dangerous time for the planet right now and while the Earth continues down the path to find balance and free herself of bondage, those who refuse to submit to the cleansing and the new liberating energies will strike out blindly to try to maintain control.

Stay centered and grounded as you release the collective rage of the last 3200 years and allow the meltdown of your internal filtering system. The meltdown is unstoppable and it is what has kept you a prisoner in this collective unconsciousness with the collective restrictions that have come with it. It is time to let go. As we move once again through the Pluto-GC alignment, the Earth and its inhabitants will be blowing a lot of steam in the next three months. This will result in physical changes both internally and externally, that we must embrace. Expect major earth and water transitions, most likely through uncontrollable changes in weather and the heating of the Earth's surface. Take this opportunity to personally release your own heat slowly and methodically, find constructive outlets for the rage, and you will make it through the transition.
