

The Meaning of the December 21, 2012 Mayan Calendar End Date

The ongoing debate over the true Mayan calendar “endtime” date, be it December 21, 2012 or otherwise, is irrelevant to the actual “endtime” implications. Calendar wars have existed since the days of the early Egyptians and continue to exist today between the Maya themselves, religious scholars and western mathematicians. The Egyptian God Thoth was banished from Egypt because he was insistent on using a calendar aligned with the star system Sirius while the other “Gods” wanted to use calendars that aligned with their own respective star systems and power bases. According to Sitchin, Thoth relocated to Central and South America and helped build the Mayan civilization as Quetzalcoatl. The Haab calendar is actually the solar Sirian calendar that Thoth introduced to the Mayas. Whichever calendar was established as the primary calendar during the various eras and cultures provided that particular “God” or institution the ultimate power to control the masses.

The key element of interest in regard to the end-date interpretation of the Mayan long-count calendar is that it converges with all the other Mayan calendars on December 21, 2012 and heralds a solstice/galactic center alignment that last took place some 13,000 odd years ago. It also is indicative of a time and space shift as we know it, as we pass through the photon belt over the galactic plane, into the galaxy’s “right” hemisphere. It additionally represents a cyclical and geologically predictable period of major Earth changes, which are already coming to pass. The Earth will not change in a flash such as on a specific date as December 12, 2012. While the changes will continue to be turbulent, they will be gradual, unless the powers that be create a nuclear holocaust first, which is always a possibility, given their own self-fulfilling Armageddon prophecies. The “endtime” prophecy and 2012 date do relate to the “final” passage over the galactic plane; one that started, and has been taking place, since the “dawning” of the Age of Aquarius, which began more or less in the 1960s although Neptune entered Aquarius in 1998 and transformed “the dream.” But the Age of Aquarius doesn’t really have a specific start date; the transformation is evolving and has more or less been targeted as manifesting after 2024, when Pluto moves into Aquarius. The renown astrologer Dane Rudhyar gave an estimate of the year 2060. Thus, the December 21, 2012 endtime date serves as the middle doorway in a “tunnel” or wormhole through multidimensional time and space.

Here’s what happened during the last significant alignment, 13,000 years ago, when the summer solstice was aligned with the galactic center and we moved through the galactic plane to the left hemisphere of our galaxy. We had the “birth” of a new civilization; as evidenced by the Sphinx and Great Pyramid. We had “Gods” interfacing with humans as evidenced by Egyptian hieroglyphics, with the creation of new technology and architecture, and a booming and fertile civilization arising in the Middle East. Sometime before that, there were major upheavals that appeared to have been Earth changes; thus, the rise of this new civilization seemed to have appeared out of nowhere.

While our western history books tend to date the rise of civilization more recently, “science”-- the antithesis of religion and “his” “story”-- has proven that our modern “calendars” and dating systems are wrong. And while this “new” civilization was born 13,000 years ago, not all was peaceful and harmonic during that particular transformation as the books of Zecharia Sitchin (Earth Chronicles) will attest to.

However, what the upcoming 2012 shift is all about is a “new paradigm”; one that is meant to move us out of the “Wars of Gods and Men” (Sitchin) – which have had a debilitating effect on the planet as a result of the power structure that evolved nearly 13,000 years ago, and which grew to favor left-brained “male” consciousness over right-brained female consciousness. The 2012 shift is meant to transform human conscious into one that is more equitable and balanced, and one that will birth a new consciousness in regard to the Earth and life. In essence, we will be moving into a consciousness of universal life, and out of the morbid obsessive consciousness of universal death. This will allow us to finally reconnect with the cosmic life force because we will, once again, be able to recognize it for what it is. This will also provide an opportunity, once again, to be good neighbors to our galactic community, instead of engaging in star wars such as in the past, when opposing forces took refuge on our planet and other planets, and continued their totalitarian wars, including “calendar” wars, under the guise of governments, religions, and fraternal organizations. These events were all designed to manipulate and control the cycles of consciousness.

The transformation of consciousness is a birthing process. In human life, a birth takes nine months. In cosmic life, it can take decades and even hundreds or thousands of years. Solar calendars do not account for the natural birth and death cycles of the cosmos and planet. They are typically and solely used to repress our innate ability to synchronize with the subtle energies. When you are out-of-sync with the natural cycles, the birthing process can be painful. If you resist, the pain is even greater. Many on our planet are resisting this transformation, particularly institutions, government structures and theocracies. We will see many destructive reactions to the natural cyclical changes as a result. On the other hand, the birthing process -- when one is in tune with one’s body, the Earth’s cycles, and the cosmos -- can be beautiful and awesome. We can then experience the “natural” death of old life as it makes way for the new, with minimal discomfort. But it means being attuned to the natural cycles to do so. Women are more in tuned with these cycles than men because of menses (moon cycles) and the birthing process. Solar calendars are not based on birthing cycles. The solar cycle is strictly electrical and when untempered by a magnetic force, will wreak havoc on the planet. However, the Mayan calendars are designed around many cycles and that’s why there are so many of them; to account for the many overlapping subtle energies that are meant to keep things in a constant state of balance. They are also three-dimensional since the Mayas walk between worlds. But taking the Mayan calendars literally, one-by-one, is as dangerous as fundamentalists taking the bible literally. You must be able to understand all the cycles and their overlapping implications, and piece them together as you would a puzzle, to interpret the whole message. Both the geometry and hidden intent are sacred and important to interpreting and predicting the events of the past, present and future.

Jesus spoke in parables to his 12 disciplines, and created a geometric set of events that transcended a literal timeline. His words, deeds, and actions were purposely veiled so that only true “seekers”—those who paid attention to the world and cosmic cycles around them, would be able to tune into the subtle meanings and discover the underlying truths that transcended yesterday, today and tomorrow. Some scholars and sects think that he did not actually exist in the flesh at the time of his discipleship, bridging time and space to appear when he did. To cover this up and confuse the masses about his appearance and intent, the calendars of that day were changed to suppress the cyclical and multidimensional evidence and events.

We are now being given our chance to transcend time and space; the very message that Jesus appeared to us to tell us about. To make the 2012 transition, it is important to keep an open mind and not attach yourself to literal outcomes such as dates of events and linear timelines. Many people in the past have predicted the end of the world and the second coming of the Messiah and have been proven wrong time-and-time again. The mystery of birth, death, and all cosmic cycles is within you. You are one with all of humanity and all of the cosmos and are the past, present, and future. You are “the one”.

The December 21, 2012 end date is only one key to understanding your multidimensional capabilities and learning how to use them. The physical world itself will not end for many; either by choice or by karma. What will end, hopefully, is a long and violent cycle of terrorism, war, death, destruction, desecration, mass manipulation and cover-up; which will allow us to reclaim and nurture the the natural cycles of the cosmos, the Earth, and the goddess within us all. That will give way to a new heaven on Earth, and for those that “get it,” it will reintroduce the ability to communicate with the multidimensional “Gods” once more.

Last, it is worth noting that these Gods are no more sacred than we. We, too, will awaken to our multidimensionality, heralding the second coming of the messiah. All in all, we are all one. The outcome of the upcoming 2012 transformation is to reconnect us to our cosmic origins and the divine, which are both within us and around us. All that the December 21, 2012 endtime date does is provide us with a point of reference. For those who make it that far, the path home will be less strenuous. For those who have resisted the natural cycles and subtle energies by subscribing to a linear and superficial history and timeline, the 2012 endtime date and the ensuing outcome will be their Armageddon.
