

Feeding the Bioterrorism, Oil and Biotechnology Monsters

So it's come down to not only who has the deadliest germs and viruses, and the most expensive vaccines and immunizations, but who will profit the most and who will/will not be the recipients of our dangerous and profitable biotechnology. And the question of responsibility for these deadly germs and their antidotes is veiled in hypocrisy, greed, and negligence!

We're in a spiritual war now, many say, while others call it political, social, and still others call it economic. Seems that this war encompasses all sides of the cube. We label it a spiritual war as we continue to be plagued with anthrax, supposedly from our religious enemies in the middle east, while here in the US we continue to develop the germs and viruses that are now being unleashed on ourselves! Sounds to me like karma! We label it an economic war while here in the US we withhold antidotes except from special-interest pharmacists and only to the highest bidders. We label it a social war when here in the US we only worry about an publicity and antidotes for diseased white-collar workers and not diseased blue-collar and non-profit workers. We label it a political war when here in the US we use ageless Machiavellian ploys to wipe out entire populations (one method of population control), at the drop of a hat. But guess what? It's all coming back to haunt us.

Yes, we are in a spiritual war, but the war is not between the fundamentalist Muslims and the rest of the world, it is between our corporate sponsors and us, the citizens of this country, who end up losing, no matter what. It is not the citizens who are being helped and being bailed out of the mess that our illegal government got us into (remember the big election coup last year??), but the boys who were in league with the last white-collar criminal administration that ran this country; daddy Bush himself, and all for the sake of oil. Go back and look at the history that wasn't in the mainstream papers. Daddy wanted to run an oil pipeline through Afghanistan. Lots of resistance, however. Still is, and this time with a vengeance! The only ones who will win anything are Bush-backed corporations who will profit at our expense, if their own poison and their plundering doesn't come back to kill them too. Ah yes, invest in oil, biotechnology and pharmaceuticals if you want to make a killing in the stock market!

The pundits say it's too late not to do anything and we can't be pacifistic. At this point, that is very true. We're in it too deep. Plus, it's much easier to take away the rights of civilians when there is chaos and fear, and incorporate population control (of the common folk) through plagues while we're at it. So even if there were an alternative, you'd never be privy to it. And we signed away our constitution for an anti-terrorism bill that won't solve a damn thing. Many will suffer; especially those without the money for pharmaceuticals. This is not new; look at all the plagues that have shaped history...all were unleashed during major economic, political, and social upheaval and war. There is good reason. It makes it so much easier to change the massive structures that exist when people are dying and those that aren't are living in fear and desperation. And you thought Bill Clinton was immoral?

As this country falls apart due to terrorism--which we are, for a large part, responsible-- watch to see who benefits in the long-term. It definitely won't be the common people (most will be killed in war or as a result of bioterrorism) and it won't be the fundamentalist Muslims, who will, by their own will, self-destruct. But keep an eye on the NY stock exchange, and if we still have the constitutional right to ask questions, find out who in Washington is investing and where. And remember, the Twin Towers were only the doorway to the NY Stock Exchange, and the doors have been blown wide open to all sorts of disgusting plagues and ungodly acts. Last, if you dare, learn to discern the truth as shamans and seers lest you be led blindly down the devil's path.

‘Tis the times' plague when madmen lead the blind.’ (Shakespeare, King Lear)
