

Discerning the Tides of Change

The patterns of change are at hand and actively working their changes. Foremost, the weather and climate of our world over the last two years has changed dramatically. In the Pacific Rim alone, a day does not go by without a major tornado, earthquake or tidal wave. For those of us who remember, at least from the 50s through the 70s, there was little to no action in the tides or the solar magnetic and ozone fields.

The issue then was radical change to a more social environment where the needs of everyone were met. Not necessarily eliminating capitalism, as those on the right would like everyone to think, but a move to balance the picture so that EVERYONE had a place and was taken care of. The civil rights movement was at the heart of the matter as was the peace movement in Berkeley and San Francisco, which was picking up steam.

The other issue was the continued deployment of US troops to Vietnam and subsequently, the battle to pull them out. Those troops saw the Nixon administration continue a war that was strictly economic only it didn't benefit you or me. And, it was a war that we couldn't win. Despite that, Nixon kept our troops there to die anyhow. And he would defy the constitution of the US, be convicted of illegal breaking and entering attempts and have to resign, in disgrace, while his partners-in-crime went to prison.

But the same forces, after a short lapse, would assume office again, through Reagan and Bush, turning to illegal arms trading and drug dealing that extended from Mexico, Central and South America to the Middle East. When their boys were caught red-handed they too, were imprisoned, only to be pardoned, but then only to revamp later on, to do more of the same.

That "later on" was interrupted by the election of Bill Clinton who probably, next to Nixon, is the most disgraced president in the last 50 years but for entirely different reasons. Bill Clinton, the womanizer, forgot that he was in the US and not in more mature countries, and the Boys went after him. Why is Clinton such a big overblown issue? Because the Boys, now heavily influenced by the religious right, want to return to Victorian times where we would all be enslaved to their religious and economic codes of behavior, and shamed or deprived of work to force us into submission. They are using Clinton's excesses as a way to outrage the American public and try to punish him. And they are also setting up their new-world order -- a step back into the past but this time on the largest of scales. But, the real question is, who is really screwing whom, and who is really performing illegal activities and what are we going to do about it?

Yes, the tides, the climate, and the weather are changing. The heat and intensity of the disasters have picked up. Capitalism is whipping up speed at the expense of any attempts that were previously made in this country to be gracious toward our own. Many of our social programs, to give dignity to everyone and a place to live, are now being moved to religious groups, courtesy of government funds that used to pay for the same.

Why move them to religious groups? Even the majority of religious groups don't want programs funded by the government. That's because when government gets involved in religion and vice versa, a new war erupts as to whose religion will get the most out of it and who will have the most power. Unfortunately, it is our government, run by the religious right, who would get the most out of it.

While some religious righters don't want the programs because it would give money to what they consider questionable religions (not Xtians), it can still work for the Boys at the top. They could establish guidelines and give money only to those that would adhere to very strict codes of behavior and servitude, theirs and not necessarily God's. That would solve who gets money and who doesn't; it would be based on behavior and codes, not religious preference. And right now the religious right is throwing those codes at us. And the monies that were already going to unrestricted humanitarian purposes that don't fall into the realm of religious oversight are being moved out of this country and into oil and war zones.

And we are watching the Earth as she gets further whipped around not only by the wind, magnetic forces, and tides, but also by the big Boys. Money is being pulled from disaster aid, leaving it to the states to deal with the effects. However, this is very much influenced by politics and far less by considerations of your welfare and mine. The Boys are really going for it. They are attempting to grab every ounce of Earth's resources, including Mexico's, while they can get away with it, and use it, relief money and all, to create wars and oil cartel deals in the US and Middle East. And this is all at the expense of the majority of the people, sustainable energy alternatives, and countries with large, fresh, deposits of resources that can be exploited.

The Earth and the winds are starting to spew and blow fire and ash. We hear it in the news everyday. Countries on the Pac Rim, in the Southern Pacific, and Middle/Near east, are having major earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. The political winds are picking up force there too. The changes are extending their reach from deep in the Earth to the sun's energy field and from one country to another as fraud at the very highest levels is erupting and being exposed.

The political winds are starting to shake up the integrity of the Earth and all political infrastructures, to the likes that we haven't seen since the 60s. And who is the center of attention during this ride? None other than Bill Clinton, a 60s has-been, whose levels of fraud hit way below the belt but had nothing to do with us. The far more serious issue at hand is the levels of fraud way up at the top of the belt, so high that you can't see them -- the Bush/Cheney arms, drugs, and oil cartels. Their backroom dealings and illegal politics and coups are being ignored, and we are the ones who will ultimately get screwed -- not Clinton's consenting partners but you and I, the unconsenting American population.

These times of great social and physical changes have been prophesized by all of the world's major religions and indigenous groups. The theme is very similar and tells of the trials and tribulations we will face from the wrath of God, as the forces of evil gain control of Earth. And it is the Earth who is the center of this force and the wrath, our living God who has sustained and nourished us.

The social and political changes will coincide with major Earth changes and shifts. We will need to be very discerning about who the real enemy is. We will need to make the effort to find the needle-in-the-haystack and move through it. We will suffer with our Earth Mother as she sheds her skin under the pressure of the abuse imposed on her and her children. We will be globally and personally drilled to the core, as we become slaves to real criminals and real global acts of war and rape.

Alternatively, we can promote making love and not war, over-characterized by Bill Clinton, but maybe for a redeeming reason. We can either buy into the fraudulent belief perpetrated by the religious right, that our sex lives will serve as the only test of our righteousness or we can pay attention to real criminal acts of rape against the Earth and women caught in war. We can believe that Clinton's pardons were despicable when in fact, they didn't effect us personally, in the least. And the things that really count, like preventing another major coup and rape of the Earth's resources; and prosecuting political and corporate cartels that manipulate energy, illegal guns and drug trading, we may miss, because of our lack of focus on the real enemies. They will be around for years to come, to pardon their own, if we don't fight with the Earth to save her people. The greener pastures will not come as a result of the use or misuse of our sexual energies; they will come as a result of the use or misuse of our Earth's energies and its sacred life and land. And it is she who will decide who enters the kingdom of heaven and who and what gets purged in the fires of hell.
